Your Honor,

Microsoft's proposed settlement (to provide hardware and software for a market they do not dominate) is simply a proof of its corporate philosophy: misuse every possible avenue to eliminate competition. Find a suitable penalty, one that actually will undo Microsoft's unjust and illegal activities. Make a way for Microsoft to justly compensate its victims, both corporate and individual. Suggest that it buy and give away a few billion dollars worth of Apple hardware and software to market segments Microsoft has dominated and listen to it scream of the injustice!

Not wanting merely to complain, allow me to suggest two things:

1. a break-up of Microsoft into two parts, one marketing the Operating System, the other everything else;
2. the purchase and free distribution of Apple computers to non-profit agencies, up to a total expense you determine to be just.

For Justice,
